

ESE Study Abroad Program in the Technion, Haifa, Israel, 2010

Eleven undergraduate students from the Preston M. Green Department of Electrical and Systems Engineering (ESE) at Washington University in St. Louis (WUSTL) visited Technion, Israel, in May 2010. They visited five Technion's engineering departments and also toured Tel Aviv and Jaffa, Haifa, druze villages, Acre, Nazareth and Holy places around the Sea of Galilee, and Jerusalem. This program was organized by Prof. Arye Nehorai, Chair of ESE, WUSTL, Prof. Nahum Shimkin and Mr. Yoram Or-Chen of the Technion.

Detailed information of the program can be found at:
<http://ese.wustl.edu/undergraduateprograms/Pages/ESEStudyAbroad2010.aspx>

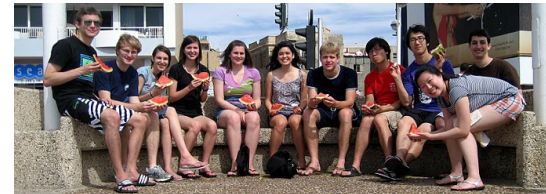

The group exploring a Druze garden.

The group inside a former market in the ancient city of Acre, once a Crusader fortress.

The closing session snapshot with our host, Mr. Yoram Or-Chen, and our chair, Dr. Arye Nehorai.

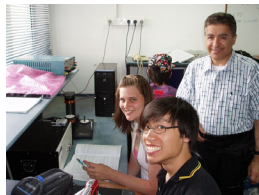

Watermelon and Bulgarian cheese
Our group enjoys this common Israeli snack on a hot summer's day.

Our group in the guest house.

We met with our host, Professor Nahum Shimkin, and learned more about the engineering facilities on the first day.

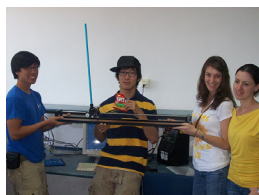

Alison Schroeder (BSSE 2011) and Sam Fok (BSBME, BSEE 2011) working on a magnetic levitation control system lab with Dr. Arye Nehorai.

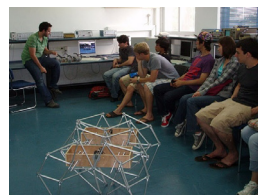

Andrew Weins (BSEE 2013) and Sam Fok (BSBME, BSEE 2011) touring the machine shop of the mechanical engineering department.

Alexander Benjamin (BSEE 2012) and Katherine Stammer (BSSE 2012) demonstrate an acoustics lab for Nimrod Peleg and Dr. Arye Nehorai.

Sam Fok (BSBME, BSEE 2011), Charlie Kang (BSSE 2011), Lisa Goldman (BSEE 2012), and our lab mentor are pictured while working on a vertical pendulum lab.

Our group listening to a senior design presentation about improving Theo Jansen's kinetic sculptures.

Overlooking the hills of Syria.

Our group touring the Hecht Museum at the University of Haifa.

Our group standing in the Jordan River.

Our group enjoying some free time on our last day in Tel Aviv.

Evan Nixon (BSSE 2012) explores the Israeli culture while riding a camel.